The birds they sang at break of day "Start again" I heard them say Don't dwell on what has passed away Or what is yet to be ... Ring the bells that still can ring

. . . . . . . . . . .

Forget your perfect offering There is a crack in everything That's how the light gets in

Quoted from 'Anthem' by Leonard Cohen